

Colour that supports learning

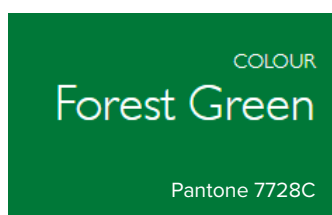

Creating purposeful, coordinated learning spaces with KI Postura+ chairs and Gratnells trays

The strongest learning spaces don't just look good, they actively support teaching, behaviour and a sense of belonging. Colour is a powerful pedagogical tool, helping schools create clear identities for year groups or subjects, promote calm focus during lessons, and make classrooms feel warm, inclusive and child-centred.

Postura+ chairs and Gratnells trays give educators a simple, reliable way to build coordinated environments that work well for pupils. By aligning seating and storage colours, schools can create zones, support routines and reinforce visual cues that help children stay organised and engaged. The result is learning spaces that feel purposeful, consistent and genuinely supportive of everyday classroom practice.

Learning in Colour: Enhancing Education Through Design

The integration of colour within classroom environments is a powerful tool that extends beyond aesthetic appeal, playing a critical role in enhancing learning, emotional well-being, and cognitive engagement. The strategic use of colour, informed by psychological insights and educational principles, can create an optimal setting for mind-brain education.

Colours can elicit psychological responses that can influence students' emotions and behaviours. Though the research in schools continues to emerge, we should be informed about how using the right colours can bring additional benefits to students.
